

Breakfast at Tiffany's – 25 April 2013

| Good – 29 | Indifferent – 8 | Bad – 0 |
|--|---|---------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A lovely treat • A very good slice of cinematic history. At least a couple of plot twists to jolt us upright. Thank you for this choice of film. • Made my cry yet again! • Obviously very dated but enjoyable, and five stars for the cat! • I had forgotten how amusing it actually was. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • She was beautiful but couldn't act drunk. He imitated a plank. Her profession was played right down - $50 for the powder room – so much of the point missed. I HATE the song! • Only really enjoyed the party scene which was lively and funny. Poor acting. Avoidance of the issues of prostitution. • Was looking forward to seeing it but | |

| | | |
|--|--|--|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none">• A light-hearted fun evening that did not have to use too much brain work, a refreshing change for once.• We enjoyed it, it may have been better as a Sunday afternoon matinee rather than an evening feature.• One of my favourite films.• Wonderful!• Great! I was interested in the similarities between Holly and Don Draper from Mad Men – they'd both grown up in rural poverty and reinvented themselves in New York. I felt they speak for a generation with the restless search for individual freedom. It made me want to read the book.• Really enjoyed it; as I hadn't seen it before it was good to see it on the big screen. | Audrey's acting is not the best. I was glad to see it in full as I hadn't seen it before. | |
|--|--|--|